WORK BEGUN ON $17,000 WPA JOB

MOKENA PUTTING IN CIRCULATING WATER SYSTEM

The village of Mokena after many years of waiting to construct a circulating water system, has been enabled to carry out this project as the result of securing WPA aid.

The project calls for an expenditure of $17,000, of which amount $11,000 is an out and out grant by the government and the remaining $6,000 will be paid by the village through water revenue bonds spread over a period of 20 years. The water department has an annual revenue of approximately $1200 and the bonds in question will be paid for entirely out of the earnings of the water department.

About 6,000 feet of water mains will be laid to connect with existing water mains, thus doing away with dead ends and providing a continuous supply of pure, fresh water.

Work on digging the trenches has been started and the first extension will be from the end of the old water main system at the Mokena public school south up Niethammer avenue to Front street to connect with the present main, thus providing pure and fresh water not only for the pupils of the school, but also for all the water users in that section of the village. Fire protection which has been lacking, will also be provided those sections of the village which have not had village water service heretofore. This added fire protection will also mean lower insurance rates.

A large amount of relief labor is to be employed on this project.

Mokena School Gets WPA Project

The Mokena school district has secured a $5,300 WPA school project and work has been begun on it. The project calls for the painting of the interior of the school rooms and of the auditorium.

In addition to this the school yard will be filled up with earth donated by the Rock Island railroad near a ridge on the company property near the Emil Cappel farm east of Mokena. All the work is to be done by relief labor.

Husband Saves Wife From Burning Home

A three room home in the New Lenox Camp Grounds occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson for a number of years, burned Tuesday morning. Mr. Wilson was having difficulty in getting the fire to burn in a small stove and began fanning the coals. The fire got a sudden start and began to burn briskly. Soot in the chimney evidently caught fire and in a few seconds fire broke out in the attic. The blaze spread so rapidly that within a few minutes the building was a mass of flames. The Joliet chemical truck was called out, but the building was beyond saving when they arrived. All the contents of the dwelling fell prey to the flames. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are now staying with their daughter in Joliet.

Mrs. Wilson has been ill in bed for sometime and when the fire broke out, her husband carried her out of the burning house to safety.

In rescuing his wife, 55 years old, Mr. Wilson who is 60 years old, suffered painful burns about his face and head while his wife's clothing was scorched by the flames.

The loss to the Wilson's is a total one as neither their home or belongings was insured.

The camp ground chapel which stood only about ten feet from the Wilson home, also caught fire. One entire wall was burned out and the interior gutted.

The New Lenox Boy Scout cabin near the Wilson cottage caught fire but the blaze was put out by a local bucket brigade.

Only the prompt work of a crew of Joliet firemen who responded to the alarm in the new booster pumper recently acquired by the department, prevented total destruction of the historic camp grounds.

Mr. Wilson is an old time newspaper man and was formerly city editor of the old Joliet Daily News.

Funk.

Mrs. Funk, then introduced Mrs. Schlegel, president of the Brainard Sketch Club. Mrs. Schlegel presented ten members of the sketch club who as a body sketched a picture as they spoke informally. Each had a part in the making of this picture which was done in chalk. Their instructor, Mrs. Ford added a line here and there occasionally and when the picture was completed, a lovely object was seen which thrilled the audience.

Mrs. Ford gave an outline of the work of the Sketch Club.

Mrs. Roy G. Hannum, gave an interesting and informative history of the Woman's Club.

Mrs. Bartlett, next introduced the Music Chairman, Mrs. Carl Panknin, who gave a brief talk on American Composers and their music. Also a short talk on the lives of composers, Nevin, Mac Dowell and a few negro composers.

A trio of club women, composed of Mrs. John Boeyer, Mrs. Alice Anderson and Mrs. Forest Rice, sang a group of negro spirituals, namely "Deep River" and "Steal Away". They also sang "To a Wild Rose" by Mac Dowell, and "Home Sweet Home" by Payne.

Mrs. Alice Anderson sang two solos, "Airly Beacon" by Ethelbert Nevin and "The Robin Sings In The Apple Tree" by Mac Dowell.

Mrs. E. R. Walter, Literature chairman of the Third District was introduced. She spoke about poetry and explained the variety of it.

Mrs. Walters recited "I Have A Rendezvous With Death" by Alan Sawyer and "In Flanders Field" by John MacCree.

Mrs. Walter also spoke of the poem by Vachel Lindsay "Abraham Lincoln Walks At Midnight" which always makes one think. She closed her part of the program by reciting Carl Sandberg's "Chicago". This drew to a close a most enjoyed and pleasant Fine Arts program.

To the invitations of Mrs. Ebenhack, all departed to the church parlors where tea was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Wm. Funk, Mrs. Carl

KILLED BY DISCHARGE OF SHOT GUN

Walter Cooper, aged 54 years, well known farmer and life long resident of Orland township, met a tragic death Sunday afternoon.

He had been visiting with his brother Herbert in the early part of the afternoon and was on his way home when he met Milton Woodrich a neighbor, George Rinke and Raymond Heiman, the latter two of Mokena, hunting rabbits on the Woodrich farm. He stopped and talked with them, asking what luck they were having. He looked at the gun Mr. Woodrich was carrying, opened it, closed it and went on ahead kicking at the base of some corn shocks to scare out rabbits if there were any. He was seen going back of a corn shock. Suddenly there was a report of the discharge of the gun. When the trio got up to the shock they saw that the full charge of the gun had struck Mr. Cooper on the side of the head.

Dr. R. H. Carmichael was summoned and relatives and friends at once were notified of the tragedy.

Later the body was removed to the West End Funeral Home in Chicago Heights where the coroner's inquest was held Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict of accidental death. Just how the tragedy occurred no one knows as none of the hunters witnessed Mr. Cooper's death.

Mr. Cooper was a good neighbor and citizen and his many friends were greatly shocked at the news of his sudden death.

The Woodrich farm where the tragedy occurred is located northwest of Mokena just over the line in Cook County.

Walter Sherman Cooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Cooper, was born in Orland township, December 31st, 1880 and resided in this community all his life. In 1905 he was united in marriage with Miss Lillian Creer of Orland township. This union was blessed with three children of whom one child preceded the father in death.

Surviving are the widow, one son Harry, one daughter, Mrs. Helen Bassitt of Wisconsin, two grand sons, his father, George Cooper, Sr., of St. Petersburg, Florida; two brothers, Herbert of Mokena, George of St. Petersburg, Florida, one sister, Mrs. Maude Ingalls of the same city and a host of other relatives.

Funeral services were held from the late home Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 p. m., concluding in the Orland Park M. E. church with Rev. Theodore Haeffel, pastor of the St. John Evangelical church of Mokena and Rev. John Mullen, pastor of the Orland Park M. E. church officiating.

Americans Are Hard to Scare

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

During the past few years there has been advocated in this country a philosophy utterly new to America.

It is the Philosophy of Fear.

It is preached by those who would destroy our faith in America as a nation and in the individual American as a self-reliant, self-respecting citizen, able and eager to pull his own weight in the boat.

It seeks to convince us that opportunity in America has vanished, that individual courage and initiative are futile, that we should look to government or other agencies, rather than to ourselves, for guidance and support.

That's what's behind most of the queer social and economic panaceas being urged on us today. That's the emotion—Fear—that the men and women who foster such foreign-brewed nostrums are trying to arouse in the American people. It's a preliminary step—as Europe has proved—toward Communism and Dictatorship and other paternalistic forms of government inimical to our American tradition of individual liberty in thought and in action.

But the effort is doomed to failure. Americans, as a people, are hard to scare. Their history proves it.

BREVITIES

Despondent over ill health, Robert Boone, forty-three years old, a disabled World War veteran, ended his life in his home in Moline.

Virginia Lee Neighbors, three months old, was burned fatally in a fire that destroyed a farm home near Anna while the baby's parents were digging potatoes.

Revised estimates which have been approved as official by the Illinois emergency relief commission indicate that 66,000 cases will remain on public relief rolls in Illinois after WPA is in full operation.

Mrs. Florence Fifer Bohrer of Bloomington, former Republican state senator, has resigned as chairman of the McLean county relief organization. She had served two years without salary or expense account.

Federal funds totaling approximately $46,500,000 were authorized to be spent in Illinois in orders approved in Washington. The money will go mainly for road improvements, grade separation, and sewer projects.

Miss Beulah A. Newell, attractive nineteen-year-old Rockford high school senior, went to her bedroom upon her return from a birthday party, removed her party dress and then shot herself with her stepfather's revolver. She died at Rockford hospital from a bullet wound directly beneath her heart.

Two persons were killed and three injured when John Duncan of Osceola drove his car into the rear end of an automobile driven by Chester Thompson of Ohio, Ill., near Bradford during a driving rain. The dead were Mrs. Walter Bickett, seventeen, and her sister-in-law, Miss Kathleen Bickett, eighteen, both of Dover.

H. C. Paddock, eighty-three years old, of Arlington Heights, died in his home after a brief illness. Mr. Paddock began his career in 1883 as publisher of the Wheaton Illinoisian, and later published the Rochelle Register. He also published newspapers in Waukegan and Libertyville. Since 1899 he had been publisher of the Cook County Herald.

Forrest M. Wogoman, thirty-four years old, one of the youngest soldiers from Illinois during the World War, died suddenly of a heart attack in his home in Libertyville. He was active in the American Legion and operated his own amateur radio station, WPJQM. Wogoman was officer manager of the Lake County State Bank and Trust company of North Chicago under the receiver.

Miss Kate Mackay, said to be La Salle county's oldest resident, observed her one hundred and third birthday by sitting up in bed and reading the newspapers. Miss Mackay has been bedfast since she fell and fractured a hip 18 months ago. She is one of the few survivors of the first Lincoln-Douglas debate and recalls that she shook hands with the former when he visited Ottawa.

John G. Oglesby, addressing delegations of his supporters from 27 downstate counties, announced that "barring an agreed ticket satisfactory to all" he would ask their support for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in the April primary. The delegates assembled at Oglesby's home at Oglehurst to receive his reply to inquiries concerning his candidacy and his platform.

Proceedings to oust Mrs. Elizabeth Druggan, mother of Terry Druggan, ex-convict and dry era beer baron, from a 240 acre Lake county estate near Lake Zurich were started in Circuit court in Waukegan. Attorneys representing Hugo Pick, trustee under the contract by which Mrs. Druggan agreed to purchase the property for $80,000, alleged she was in unlawful possession due to failure to carry out the contract.

Word was received in Waukegan that a $50,909 loan and grant for the construction of what City Engineer Henry Bleck characterized as the north shore city's "most important WPA project" had been rescinded by Washington officials of the Works Progress administration. The project was for the installation of sewerage systems in the only area in the city without a sewer. In the affected area are 58 homes and a factory employing 1,200 workers.

Robert Kiek of Libertyville, nineteen years old, a Civilian Conservation corps worker, set fire to a railroad depot and his grandfather's barn in Libertyville. He confessed setting the fires for revenge after five hours of questioning by railroad detectives and Lake county authorities.

William S. Corsa, sixty-nine, nationally known breeder of Percheron horses and Berkshire hogs, died at his home in White Hall after a heart attack. Corsa was past-president of the National Berkshire association and at the time of his death was a director of the National Percheron society.

VISITORS TO PADDY'S POND

THE hunter who was hiding near the pond of Paddy, the Beaver, hoping that Lightfoot, the Deer, would come back there and give him a chance for a shot, was a man of patience. Also he was a man who understood the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. He knew that if he would not be seen he must not move. He didn't move. He sat as motionless as if he were a part of the very log on which he was sitting.

For some time there was no sign of any living thing. Then, from over the tree tops in the direction of the the hunter did not move, Paddy decided to wait.

Now the hunter was sorely tempted to shoot those ducks, but he knew that if he did he would have no chance that day to get Lightfoot, the Deer, and it was Lightfoot he wanted. So Mr. and Mrs. Quack swam about with in easy range of that terrible gun without once suspecting that danger was anywhere near.

By and by the hunter's keen eyes caught a movement at one end of Paddy's dam. An instant later Bobby Coon appeared. It was clear that Bobby was quite unsuspicious. He had something, just what the hunter could not make out. He took it down to the edge of the water and there carefully washed it. Then he climbed up on Paddy's dam and began to eat. You know, Bobby Coon is very particular about his food. Whenever there is water near, Bobby washes his food before eating. Once more the hunter was tempted, but did not yield to the temptation, which was a very good thing for Bobby Coon.

All this Lightfoot, the Deer, saw as he stood among the little hemlock trees at the top of the ridge behind the hunter. He saw and he understood. "It is because he wants to kill me that he doesn't shoot at Mr. and Mrs. Quack or Bobby Coon," thought Lightfoot, a little bitterly. "What have I ever done that he should be so anxious to kill me?"

Still the hunter sat without moving. Mr. and Mrs. Quack contentedly hunted for food in the mud at the bottom of Paddy's pond. Bobby Coon finished his meal, crossed the dam and disappeared in the Green Forest. He had gone off to take a nap somewhere. Time slipped away. The hunter continued to watch patiently for Lightfoot, and Lightfoot and Paddy, the Beaver, watched the hunter. Finally, another visitor appeared at the upper end of the pond, a visitor in a wonderful coat of red. It was Reddy Fox.

So Mr. and Mrs. Quack Swam About Within Easy Range of That Terrible Gun.

Big River, came the whistle of swift wings, and Mr. and Mrs. Quack alighted with a splash in the pond. For a few moments they sat on the water, a picture of watchful suspicion. They were looking and listening to make sure that no danger was near. Satisfied at last, they began to clean their feathers. It was plain that they felt safe. Paddy, the Beaver, was tempted to warn them that they were not as safe as they thought, but as long as

FOOD SUGGESTIONS

A FRUIT cocktail is liked by such a large majority of people that it is usually served as a beginner for a luncheon or dinner. Fresh fruit is always the favorite, but now that canned grapefruit is available in almost any market, it, with other canned fruits, makes a most tasty cocktail. A canned pear, peach, a bit of pineapple with some of the fruit juice will make a most delectable cocktail. Sometimes the addition of a fresh orange will add to the flavor, with a cherry or two for color.

When something different is wanted for a vegetable try:

Celery au Gratin.

Cut the celery into small bits and cook in boiling salted water until tender but not too soft. Drain and place in a baking dish with a rich white sauce, a layer of each and top with the celery, covered with a half-inch top of buttered crumbs. Bake in a hot oven until the crumbs are brown. Add grated cheese for a more nourishing dish, which, if a cupful of cheese is used, will do for a main dish at luncheon.

One of these chill days serve fried salt pork with cream gravy, baked potatoes and onions and apples cooked together in a small amount of sweet fat. If the apples are very tart add a little sugar which will also add to the flavor and color. Cook the onions until about half done before adding the apples sliced. Serve as a vegetable.

The daily serving of lettuce, green vegetables such as cabbage, endive or cooked spinach or chard is most important for the health of the family.

Dress the lettuce simply with hot bacon fat and a dash of vinegar or lemon juice, or melted butter, hot, if bacon is not liked. Then the old-fashioned way of serving lettuce with just sugar and vinegar is one of which few ever tire.

THE BLIND
POSTMAN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

EACH day the mailman makes his round,
His eyes forever on the ground,
His mind forever on the past,
For grief has found his heart at last.
Each day the mailman has to bear
This new, this unaccustomed, care,
And men behold in his hurt eyes
A look half sorrow, half surprise.

For grief has come and struck him down,
The merry postman of the town,
Who used to whistle up the street,
And had his friends, and all things sweet.
And, in his eyes, with sorrow bent
Is something of astonishment
That such things happen, that one day
Can come and take so much away.

And yet for thirty years he bore
His missives to his neighbor's door,
Black-bordered letters, or a page
Scrawled by the lonely hand of age,
The pleading of some woman's heart,
Who hears the faithless one depart—
And yet within the mailman's eyes
The look is sorrow, and surprise.

Do You Ever

Whether the "Pain"
Remedy You Use
is SAFE?

Ask Your Doctor
and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's
Well-Being to Unknown
Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this—and see that you get what you want.

A Law Every

Never Give Your Child An Unknown Remedy without Asking Your Doctor First

According to any doctor you ask, the only safe way is never to give your child a remedy you don't know all about, without asking him first.

When it comes to "milk of magnesia," that you know everywhere, for over 60 years, doctors have said "PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia for your child."

So—always say Phillips' when you buy. And, for your own peace of mind, see that your child gets this; the finest men know.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

While walking yesterday I saw a man with a tin cup in his hand and a sign on his hat which read: "Please help the blind." I dropped 10 cents in his cup, then, looking at him, I saw he was only blind in one eye. Did I do wrong to give him a dime?

Yours truly,

MISS TAKEN.

Answer: You did wrong in giving him a dime. As he was only blind in one eye, you should have given him a nickel.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

My wife and I have saved up $40. Now she wants to buy a cow and I want to buy a bicycle. I claim she'll look funny riding around town on a cow. Am I right?

Truly yours,

WATTEL I. DEW.

Answer: She sure would look funny riding a cow, but no funnier than she'd look milking a bicycle.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a boy seventeen years of age. I am crazy about a girl my own age. I told my father that I was in love. He looked at me for a moment, then said: "My son, love is like a plate of hash!" He then walked away from me. What did he mean by comparing "love" with a "plate of hash"?

Truly yours,

WILL HUGH ANNSER.

Answer: He has experience, my boy. What he means is "you must have confidence in it to enjoy it."

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have read a great deal about beauty doctors and so-called face lifters. Can you tell me the best way for an aging woman to keep "her good looking youth"?

Truly yours,

B. U. TEEFUL.

Answer: The best way for a woman to keep her "youth" is not to introduce "him" to any other women.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a boy twelve years of age and have just entered an essay competition. There are two subjects to be written about, one is "Grasshopper" and the other is "Grasswidow." Are these subjects alike or are they different, and why?

Sincerely,

X. AMPLE.

Answer: They are exactly alike because they'll both jump at the first chance.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows contempt for Garth. Through Garth's guidance the plane soon reaches the claim site. Huxby and Ramill, after making several tests, assure Garth his claim is nearly valueless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are willing to take a chance in investing a small amount. Sensing treachery ahead, Garth secretly removes a part from the motor of the plane. Huxby and Lilith taunt Garth, but their tone soon changes when they try to start the plane. Returning to shore they try to force Garth to give up the missing part. Garth manages to set the monoplane adrift and the current carries it over the falls. He points out that he is their only hope in guiding them out of the wilderness.

CHAPTER III—Continued

"Bon voyage!" said Garth. "You may reach the top of the glacier with the soles still on your golf-course boots. Your father, I fancy, will prefer to wait here a while. For one thing, he knows that in his present condition, he never could climb the pass. In the second place, he has no desire to go down the other side on his uppers."

Huxby looked from Mr. Ramill's flimsy oxfords to the girl's fashionable sport boots, and then at Garth's worn moccasins.

"Well, Jack, what's the answer?" "That it's not well," Garth replied. "In the first place, you'll drop that name and tone in speaking to me. Am I understood?"

Huxby stood silent, his eyes cold and lips tight drawn. But Mr. Ramill spoke for him, with decisiveness: "That is understood, Garth. We are all now in the same boat, and you are skipper. How about the shoe problem?"

"Moosehide. We'll first shift along-shore to the mouth of the placer rill. It's the best place to camp. I'll then go on around to the muskeg and collect some hides."

"Don't be too sure of that," Huxby differed. "Keep hold of the rifle, chief. He'd streak out and leave us to hold the sack."

"Haven't you realized yet that the joke is on you?" Garth inquired. "It's a question of trusting me absolutely, or not at all. Take your choice."

Mr. Ramill handed over the rifle. Huxby's hand tightened on the butt of his lowered pistol. Garth gazed past him down the lake.

"The plane seems to be edging over towards the east shore. There's a ford up here, Huxby. You're welcome to try for the plane. If you save her, I'll call it a break of the game in your favor, and we'll all ride out on the air."

"Lay off, Vivian," Mr. Ramill interposed. "The plane has veered out again. He has us nipped fast."

Without any reply, Huxby thrust his pistol inside his leather jacket and started up the stream bank. Garth came aslant to his pack. He slung it on his back.

"Come on. Let's head for camp."

"Why not follow Vivian?" Mr. Ramill inquired. "It is still possible the plane may drift ashore."

"A hundred to one chance it will not, sir. We'll go out on moosehide, if at all. I've decided not to make it alone. A trip through the muskegs may lead you to realize that even lone woodsy prospectors should be entitled to the fruits of their discoveries."

The girl's smoldering rage flared out at him: "You scoundrel! Decoy us into this beastly hole, and then turn our plane adrift. You cowardly sneak! Everything drifting away in it—and all the food and wine. Oh, d—n! What am I going to do? I'll starve!"

Her father looked at Garth with the first sign of concern that he had shown. "Yes, that's it. You might have thought of her. A girl so delicately reared! I say nothing as to myself; it's all in the game. But a lady—to drag her down into the raw like this! Marooning her to starve in the bogs!"

Garth looked from father to daughter. "A lady, did you say? Oh, yes, to be sure—a dainty, refined lady, who curses and drinks and joins in schemes to bilk a supposedly simple bush vagabond out of his fortune."

"Pah!" she scoffed. "Whining because we would not let you foist yourself on us as a gentleman. As for your twaddle about that claim, mines are treasure trove. They belong to whoever is clever enough to get hold of them."

"Right-o, my lady," Garth approved. "Which leaves only the small matter of food and drink to be considered. You'll be able to chew moose meat, I fancy, after you've fasted off some of your fastidiousness."

Indifferent whether or not the girl and her father followed him, Garth started to back-trail through the lower growth of spruce trees.

Where the spring rill came bubbling over ledges down to the rocky shore, he halted in a small clearing. Here had been his camp on his previous visit to the valley. Ten feet up the branch-trimmed trunks of four closely grouped birch trees, a tattered moosehide hung over the edge of a pole platform.

Garth glanced up at the platform. "Wolverines have robbed the food cache. But there's plenty more meat on the hoof. While I go for some, you two will start gathering wood."

Miss Ramill's nerves were on edge. She snapped at him hysterically: "You insolent bully! Don't you dare to try to give me orders."

Her father had squatted down on the warm rock, tired out by his day's exertions. Garth spoke to him:

"Too much is enough. The condition was that all three of you would do as I thought best. Huxby promptly tried again to bluff me. Now your daughter balks."

Mr. Ramill raised his down-sagged head. "You'll not be able to say that of me, young man. I stand by your terms. I always play to win. But no one can truthfully claim I ever welen or revoke. I will take your orders, and so will Vivian, now that he has had time to realize the situation."

"How about your daughter?"

"I'll leave that to you. If you can control her, you'll be doing more than I have ever been able to do."

Garth met the disdainful gaze of the girl with a smile. "So your father turns you over to me, my lady. Let me hasten to assure you, I beg to decline the honor."

"Ah, indeed?"

"Yes. I'll let old Mother Nature spank you till you come to your senses."

Her blue eyes flared with scorn. "Oh, you—you! D—n!"

"Better save your energy," he advised. "You'll need it all, unless your pride stoops to the squaw work of camp-fire tending. Smoke drives off insects. For another thing, no wolf, wolverine or lynx, or even a grizzly, will venture close to a fire. Think that over. Mr. Ramill, you have your patent lighter."

He swung away between the spruces without waiting for any reply. Left alone with her exhausted father, the girl might come to realize how utterly she had crashed out of her soft and luxurious civilized environment.

A girl whom even her father had been unable to control! That had been evident from the first. She was a badly spoiled product of the jazz-age—willful, arrogant, utterly selfish. Fortunately she had shown herself no less, hard physically than mentally. Otherwise he would have played the game in a different way. No weak-muscled woman could make that travois to the Mackenzie.

As for her father, he had only himself to thank. A pirate should expect to take his chances. He might be gotten out to the river, and he might not. That depended upon his heart. Soft muscles could be hardened. Not so a weak heart.

No question as to the girl and Huxby, if they obeyed orders. They could make it.

A crash in the alders broke in upon Garth's thoughts. The splash that followed told him a moose had caught his scent and taken to the lake. To have run to the bank and shot the swimming beast would have been easy. Only, he had no canoe or raft, and the water here was rather deep offshore.

He stalked down through the timber. For the first hundred feet or so out from the shore thickets, willows grew along both sides of the low ledge. A peer through the foliage showed the immense palmate antlers of an old bull moose.

Garth flattened down on the moss-covered dyke and crawled away from the bank. Shoreward, on the other side, he caught sight of a slight movement among the willows. He rose on his knees and swung up his rifle. Though he was still screened by the brush alongside the ledge, his quick movements sent a strong whiff of man-scent downwind.

With loud snorts of alarm, two cow moose, a calf, and a young bull heaved up among the willows less than a dozen yards apart. They started to plunge forward out of the thicket. Garth's first shot dropped the calfless cow with a bullet through the head. His second bullet glanced off the base of the bull's left antler. Partly stunned by the shock, the bull swerved sideways, only to drop in his tracks, shot through the heart.

Silently as he had stalked out the ledge, Garth returned to solid ground. He knew that the snorting, bawling moose in the pools would soon quiet down and return to their lily-pool feeding. The only requirement was for him to keep out of sight and either across or down wind from the stupid beasts. They had not learned to fear human hunters.

A few steps along the bank brought him to a game trail through the thickets. He laid down his rifle and waded out to the dead bull. The body lay on a down-beaten mat of willow stems. Garth at once set to work with his knife.

To dress out a thousand-pound animal is no light task, even under the best of conditions. Garth thought nothing of it. All the hide within reach slid free to the quick draw of his curved knife blade. With belt-ax and knife he cut off the antlered head, then the upper foreleg and hindquarter. After that he was able to heave the carcass over by the leverage of the other legs.

When he had finished with the bull, he went to the cow. She weighed perhaps 200 pounds less, and was therefore easier to dress out.

With the two skins and all the meat ashore, he took a dip in a clear pool and washed his buckskins. As he sloshed out of the willows in the wet garments, he saw Miss Ramill staring through her headnet at the eight big legs. He had hooked them on the stubs of spruce limbs. Her gaze lowered from the other raw moose products that were piled on one of the hides. She turned from them loathingly.

"Faugh! What a sickening mess! Have you started a packing plant?"

"The packing is just about to start," he replied. "Are you too feeble to carry this rolled skin? It's the lighter one."

"That filthy thing? You may be sure I'm not so feeble-minded as to touch any of your butcher mess."

"Very well. Only remember, it's your own choice, sister."

He bagged the contents of the bull hide, slung it on his back, picked up his rifle, and headed for camp. The girl looked from him to the folded moose cow skin, hesitated, flushed angrily, and followed, empty-handed.

While still some distance from the rill, he whiffed a tang of wood smoke. He quickened his step. It gave him a pleasant surprise. After all, the girl seemed to have given in, at least partly. He turned to her with a friendly look. She met it with a scornful smile.

They came to the opening where Garth trimmed a pair of green willow spits, opened the moosehide, and cut two slices of liver. He put a slice on each spit, and started to broil them over the coals. With a look of disgust, Miss Ramill turned her back and sat down on the rill bank.

Before long the broiling liver began to send out an appetizing odor. The girl's nose went up for an involuntary sniff. Garth met the intent look of her father, and allowed his left eyelid to flutter slightly. Another turn of the spits completed the broiling. He handed one of them to Mr. Ramill.

The millionaire lifted his headnet to take a gingerly nibble at his hot meat. His heavy face brightened with a surprised smile. He smacked his lips and bit off a large mouthful. At the sound, his daughter jerked around. Garth was biting into the other piece of liver.

"The girl cried out her indignation: 'You greedy pigs! Where's my piece?'"

Garth pointed to the moosehide. "Help yourself."

He met her furious look with cool indifference, and went on eating. Unable to blast him, she turned to her father.

"I'll take yours, Dad. You've had two bites. It will not take you long to cook another piece. Make it three."

At that, Garth swung around between father and daughter.

"Mr. Ramill, we'll settle this right now. You said you'd leave her to me. I cooked that meat for you. She will cook her own meat, or go without."

The older man sat for several moments considering the matter. He then raised his piece of meat and resumed his meal. Lilith Ramill stared at him, her eyes wide.

"My own father! But wait till Vivian comes back!"

He winced. Garth ignored her. "Better lie down and rest, sir. You've done enough for a while. I'm going to get you into hard training as soon as possible. But we must not overdo it at the start. Might mean a breakdown."

"I am tired, boy—and hungry as a shark. Could eat all the rest of that liver."

"Not now. You'll rest, do some work, and then get another slice. Call this valley one of those physical culture sanitariums where the tired business man is worked and dieted back into fit condition."

"I have yet to agree to such training, Garth."

"Take your choice. If you refuse, I give you my word you'll never reach the Mackenzie. I might back-pack you in some places; you don't weigh much over two hundred. Happens, though, I'm not a donkey. You'll go on your own feet."

"Very well. Put me on them."

Obedient to directions, the big man stretched out flat upon the sunwarmed rock. Garth turned about to pull the moosehide and what was upon it into the shade of a birch.

Miss Ramill thrust in front of him and seized his knife. She slashed at the liver. The blade was razor-sharp. Her angry stroke not only cut through the liver, it slit the moosehide as well.

Garth said nothing. Enough for him that hunger had humbled the girl's pride. She had learned her first lesson. Long hours had passed since her finicky breakfasting on wine and delicatessen in the cabin of the monoplane, far over on the Mackenzie. She was fairly ravenous.

Her rouged lips twitched with anticipation as she held the spitted slice of liver close upon the coals of the low-burnt fire. Well satisfied, Garth hung the remaining liver, the tongues and mufles under the cache platform. A smudge-fire on the ground below the meat drove off the flies.

Miss Ramill's only thought had been for her food. She did not think to put fresh fuel on the cook-fire. When it died down to embers, she jerked the partly burnt, inwardly rare slice of liver from the charred willow spit. There was now no finicky fastidiousness about her eating. She thrust off her headnet and sank her teeth into the piece of liver with the gusto of a hungry boy. Bite followed bite in rapid succession.

Indians' Ark Legend Is Still Related in Quebec

The remnants of the Indians in the country surroundings Capes Trinity and Eternity, the high points on the Saguenay river, still cling to the ancient belief that the ark or, as they term it, "the big canoe," rested on the top of Cape Trinity, 2,000 feet above the level of the river which skirts its base, and was placed there by a flood which inundated the rest of the earth, destroying all life thereon, only the families of worthy Indians, as well as pairs of the various animals and birds being preserved by the Great Manitou, whose guiding hand landed "the big canoe" on the last bit of earth left uncovered by water.

The Indians also have a legend, says a Tadoussac (Quebec) correspondent in the Washington Star, which bears considerable resemblance to the casting of Satan and his rebellious followers out of paradise. According to the Indian tradition, the Great Manitou cast the "fallen angels" over the precipice of Cape Trinity. All met death in the river below with the exception of the leader, who was so strong that the fall of 2,000 feet only crippled him.

As this "angel" gathered strength he became the demon of the river, wrecking canoes, drowning peaceful Indians and wreaking havoc in general.

Mayo, the father of the Indian race, decided to seek and vanquish him in a hand-to-hand encounter. The battle between the two was terrific, Mayo swinging the demon around his head and against the rock of Trinity with such force that the three great gashes in the mountain resulted from the contacts, so the tradition continues. Finally Mayo was victorious, crushing out the life of the demon and thus restoring peace and quiet to the beautiful waters of the Saguenay.

Mourning Dove Like Pigeon

The female mourning dove looks very much like a pigeon. Her dress is dull grayish brown or fawn colored, and she lacks the coloring around the neck which distinguishes the male. When in repose the female is a flabby, supine, shiftless-looking creature, but she inspires one of the most famous of all bird love calls. Perhaps the male mourning dove is inspired to his plaintive call in appreciation of the refinement of his mate, for she is among the gentlest of birds.

Fish Hosts to Clams

Clams and mussels begin their lives on the skin, gills, or fins of fish, where they live as parasites for two months. During this time, they develop a foot, and then drop off to begin an independent existence.

OCEANS AND HILLS SLOW DOWN EARTH; DAYS LENGTHENING

French astro-physicists are completing a series of calculations which prove this world of ours is slowing down, like a wobbly top, as it spins around its polar axis.

The loss of speed is estimated by scientists at the Meudon observatory, near Paris, at one-tenth thousandth of a second a month at the present time, which means that in 1,000,000 years our 24-hour day will be lengthened to a 41-hour day.

This phenomenon is caused partly by the fact that the earth is losing the perfect streamlined curves of its early days and is becoming wrinkled with mountains and volcanoes which impede its whirling.

The main factor, however, is stated to be found in tidal movements. Working under the combined influence of sun and moon, oceans bulge out and act as brakes on the rotation of the earth. Another important cause is found in geological disturbances brought about by the shifting of internal masses. This flinging about of the world's contents, like so much loose baggage in a freight car, tends to detract from the constancy of the earth's spinning.

Calculations to date show this loss of speed increases progressively so that 100 years hence the earth's rotation will have suffered a loss of 18 seconds, and within two centuries, one minute and 12 seconds. In 2,000 years it will be one hour and 50 minutes behind its merry-go-round schedule. This lengthening of the day is explained by the longer time it would take for the earth to complete one single turn on its polar axis.

The majority of these calculations are based on the studies of tidal actions on planets and their satellites carried out by the astro-physicist, M. Antoniadi, and his collaborators at the Meudon observatory.

This clocking of the speed of the globe's rotation is entirely apart from computations regarding the changes in time that it takes the earth to revolve around the sun every year.—Detroit News.

Longest Fire-Break

The Ponderosa Way, said to be the longest fire-break in the world, is nearing completion, J. H. Price, writing in American Forests, reported recently. It extends lengthwise through a major part of California, from the Pitt river in the north to the Kern river in the south, a distance of 650 miles. It varies in width from 50 to 200 feet, and follows the lower edge of the Ponderosa pine-belt, protecting the pines from fires starting in the foothills below.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

Death From the Air
Barring the Inventor
The Republican Odds
To Starve Italy

Warfare in Ethiopia consists largely in surprising the enemy in some narrow gorge or valley.

Ethiopians have thus surprised Italians on a small scale. Now the Italians have shown that the thing can be done from the air by killing 2,000 Ethiopian warriors, of whom 20,000 were massed in the Mel Mezo valley, south of Makale. Ethiopians withstood, with fine courage, the attack with machine guns, incendiary and explosive bombs.

England really has free speech. On your soap box in Hyde Park you may say what you please, if you do not advocate crime.

But England does not like free speech from another country, through the ether. The British Broadcasting company will not let Marconi talk from Rome to Englishmen over the radio. He might convince them that it is preposterous to try to starve out Italy for doing in Ethiopia what England has done in many places. The ruling seems hard on Marconi, considering that he invented radio. Without him there would be no "British Broadcasting company."

Those that make betting a business are often sound in their political judgments. They are at least cold, calculating; sentiment does not cloud their vision.

On the Republican Presidential nomination the betting now stands:

Senator William E. Borah, 8 to 1. Governor Landon of Kansas, 10 to 1. Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, 15 to 1. Col. Frank Knox of Illinois, 15 to 1. Governor Hoffman of New Jersey, Ogden L. Mills, Senator David A. Reed, all 20 to 1.

Professional bettors agree that Governor Landon is gaining, and will probably lead the procession at 6 to 1 in a few days. Band wagon climbers are more and more polite to Governor Landon.

The "sanctions" wall thrown by England and France around Italy, smaller nations co-operating, to "suffocate and starve Italy," as Mussolini puts it, is now complete. Two million young organized Italians protest against the effort to punish Italy for doing to Ethiopia what England and France have done to other, more nearly civilized countries.

H. G. Wells, aged sixty-nine, younger and more brilliant than when he wrote "Doctor Moreau's Island" and "The War of the Worlds," now in America on his way to see Hollywood, says, "The film is a finer art than the novel, stage or the opera."

Mr. Wells' open mind proves his youth. The moving picture is greater in its possibilities than book, stage or opera, because it contains all three, plus the marvelous power of photography.

Britain's ambassador is conferring with our State department concerning Japan's plan to seize Chinese provinces, containing 95,000,000 Chinese, 35,000,000 more than the total population of Japan.

If the Japanese could control, arm and use 100,000,000 Chinese in the air and on the ground, that would be interesting. But it would not be our business, and it is to be hoped that the British will not persuade our State department that this country ought to attend to it.

Spiritually, politically and otherwise important is the proposed "merger" approved by bishops of the three branches of the Methodist Episcopal church. Together, the Methodist Episcopal church, Methodist Episcopal church, South, and Methodist Protestant church would number 7,500,000 members, the largest Protestant group.

"Battling the Gale"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter.

YO, HO, me hearties—and wrap another net around that mackerel. We've got a yarn from a Gloucester fisherman, today—and I'm thinking that there must be a lot of salts around Boston who could tell a similar story. They've been fishing out of Gloucester as long as anybody can remember, and the yarns those birds could tell would fill a book.

Here's a sample from Clifford Pyche, the tale of a fishing trip that almost turned out vice versa, with the fish getting the meal instead of the fishermen.

Cliff Pyche shipped on the schooner George Campbell in 1908, and sailed out of Gloucester bound for the Grand Banks in November of that same year. Fishing wasn't so good on the Banks, however, and they moved westward until they hit a streak of luck about 80 miles off the eastern end of Nova Scotia.

For about a week the fishing was good. Then the barometer began falling and the boys on the George Campbell knew they were in for a blow. At the same time a breeze began to spring up and the waves began to pound the George Campbell.

They Learn What Big Waves Really Are.

In a few hours that breeze had turned into a gale.

"The waves were rolling in mountain high," says Cliff. "The old George Campbell was shivering like a frightened horse. We had about 170 fathoms of cable out, and every time she fell into a sea she would drive 10 or 12 feet of bowsprit under water."

The George Campbell was shipping a lot of water, too. The watch was doubled and the men were sent to the pumps, but pump as they would the water kept rising in the hold.

Then they knew there was a leak somewhere. And a leaky vessel, in a hurricane, with the nearest land about 80 miles away, was no laughing matter.

The captain lifted the hatch in the cabin floor and looked down into the hold.

It didn't take him long to spot the leak. One of the planks in the after quarter had started and the water was pouring in with terrific force.

The whole crew knew that if they didn't stop that leak they'd be paying a call on Davy Jones before the night was over. They got axes out of the storeroom and started to chop the cabin floor away to get at the hole in the side.

While the men were chopping at the cabin floor, others were tearing their blankets into pieces to provide material with which to stop the opening. The water was up flush with the cabin floor by this time.

Fishing Wasn't Good on the Banks, and They Moved Eastward.

The Campbell's in a Bad Fix—and So Is Cliff.

It was up to Cliff Pyche's waist, as, down in the hold, he started to battle with the leak.

The George Campbell was still riding at anchor, and the skipper knew that if she stayed there the strain would open more seams. He cut the anchor cable and headed the schooner for the nearest land, 80 miles to the leeward.

Then, while half the crew manned the pumps and bailed with buckets from the cabin and the other half went to work on the sails, they started that 80-mile race to save their lives from the clutches of old Father Neptune.

Then ran all that night, with a helmsman lashed to the wheel—the rest of the crew bailing, pumping and plugging the leak with torn pieces of blanket. The surge of the sea tore those pieces of cloth out almost as fast as Cliff and his pals could stuff them in. Then the water would gush into their faces.

"I think," says Cliff, "that that night was the worst that any of us had ever experienced on salt water—and we had some pretty old salts on board with us at that."

The next morning the gale was still howling—showing no signs of abating its fury. The seas were like young mountains, battering the George Campbell's weakened hull.

Her crew carried on, bailing and pumping—each man in turn being lashed to the wheel to steer his trick.

Land Was Never So Welcome as Now.

At 4 o'clock that afternoon, they sighted the Island of Miquelon, off the coast of Newfoundland, and headed into the dangerous shoal water between Miquelon and the Island of St. Pierre.

The seas were so mountainous that they seemed to be breaking from the bottom of the ocean.

For half an hour it was nip and tuck, with the waves burying the schooner up the shearpoles at every dip, and the George Campbell fighting pluckily to keep her keel in deep water.

At length she got in by the headlands, with St. Pierre harbor off the starboard bow, and the skipper sent a distress signal up the main rigging. A tow-boat came out and hauled her in to the marine railways, and she was hauled out of the water.

She lay in drydock a week before she was ready to go to sea again. Cliff got back in Gloucester in time for Thanksgiving, and that year he sure had plenty to be thankful for.

Buys Straps To Punish Unruly Pupils

By Earl Booth, Will Co., School Superintendent

As a general rule, I am finding the discipline excellent in our schools. The co-operation between teachers and pupils is as a rule, very encouraging. However, most rules have their exceptions and I am not surprised to find occasionally a school with one or two youngsters that have not learned the value of courtesy, kindness, and obedience to reasonable regulations. Therefore I have purchased twenty-five straps so that any teacher that needs one may have one upon request. I am hoping that no teacher surrenders the efficiency of the school to any youngster that willfully seems to desire to usurp her authority.

The following is more agreeable reading and more pleasant to think about. November 19th, as per a previous arrangement, Superintendent John Weiland and two of his assistants, Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Engels motored to Joliet, had dinner with me and drove to Steger to a School Board meeting called by Supt. Schmann. Mr. Heffernan, Assistant Superintendent of Cook County was also there. The purpose of this meeting was to assist the Steger Board of Education in solving its very serious financial difficulties. When I think of such a meeting as this and the amount of energy required to have it, it just seems to me that during my twenty-eight years in the school business I have never seen anything like it. Mr. Reynolds is the State Department's Attorney, and, having had twelve years experience in the school business himself, he is an expert in his line. When we left, the Steger Board and Supt., told me that they had never dreamed that such a service was available to a school in distress. There are several other spots in Will County that are in need of just such a service; and they may have it upon request.

After considerable discussion with State Supt. Weiland, I have decided that the Teachers' Institute to be held January 31 will be more than teachers' institute. All school boards, township treasurers, and township trustees, will be invited into this meeting and a special program for their benefit will be provided by our State Department. I am sure the teachers of the County will not object to offering all help available to those in control of the schools and of the school finances.

I have made up my mind that institutes should not only be helpful to teachers but they should be helpful to all others who have any part in the management and control of the schools. As soon as our program has been completed, a copy will be mailed to each school officer of the County with a special invitation to attend this meeting.

Our High School Auditorium has plenty of room for us all. At that time, I trust that we may perfect a Will County Principals' Association and a Will County School Boards' Association with regularly elected officers in order that we may work together for the next four years to the greatest possible advantages of the boys and girls of Will County.

News Flashes

From Springfield

By Bernice T. Van Der Vries

Although the legislative calendar is far from being cleared, an early adjournment is anticipated by the leaders of the two houses.

Speaker Devine in the house, by holding conferences made up of members of both parties interested in various measures has made a noble effort to curtail what was expected to be a long session. Such conferences were held on amendments to the old-age pension bill, on the proposals for the administration of the pension law and aid for mothers and dependent children and for welfare activities in general. If the conference plan had been carried out in the Senate, the difficulties which arose there on the above named proposals might have been avoided.

On Wednesday, the smouldering feud between downstate and Chicago broke into flames in the Senate, and some of the smoke drifted over from the north side to the south of the state house. In the house the geographical lines began to appear on the Motor Drivers License discussion. The main source of disagreement in the Senate was on the subject of Cook County's method of raising funds for pauper relief. In the bills turning relief from the counties to the townships, amendments were offered which would compel Chicago to levy taxes for pauper relief, Chicago relief now being handled by Cook County. 102 votes will be necessary to pass the amended bill in the house if the law is to become effective at once. Many downstate members felt that the bills should not be jeopardized for the downstate counties and that the Chicago question should be settled at a regular session.

The Republican side through an amendment offered by Representative Schnackenberg forced an increase in the amount appropriated for the state's payments for old age pensions. Mr. Schnackenberg's amendment raised the appropriation from five million to ten million dollars. Minority leader Adamowski argued that while such an amount might be needed the funds were now available and hinted that another increase in the sales tax (from three per cent to four per cent) might be necessary. While the debate was taking place, Rep. F. W. Lewis (Democrat) prepared a substitute amendment providing for $9,000,000.00. Mr. Schnackenberg withdrew his amendment and the Lewis amendment was adopted.

The Driver's License Bill as well as the Sennett bill providing for more strict regulation of drunken drivers by the courts are both at passage stage (third reading). Predictions favor the Sennett bills are more agreeable to downstate members.

The unemployed questions will probably be in a commission for study.

The annual meeting of the Illinois State School Association and Illinois Cities Superintendent Association was held in Springfield on Wednesday and Thursday. They drew the largest attendance on record. All the delegates were determined that school problems both of an emergency and a long time program should have aggressive and prompt action by the state administration, "Equal Educational Opportunities for all Children in Illinois" could well be the slogan of the associations.

A bill of particular interest to towns in the 7th District, was introduced by Representative Frank E. Foster which permits diagonal parking on city streets 48 or more feet wide. The highway traffic code passed in the regular session took away this right from citizens when the street is a part of the state highway system. The towns of La Grange, Des Plaines and Forest Park have urged this bill and probably many others are affected.

Conestoga Wagon Drivers First to Keep to Right

Why do American drivers keep to the right instead of to the left as in England and some Continental countries? In the new Columbia Encyclopedia drivers of the famous Conestoga wagons are credited with originating the custom because they rode the left wheel horse. The wagons, often called "ships of inland commerce," carted freight over the Allegheny mountains before the railroads were built in 1850.

The Conestoga wagon originated in Pennsylvania before the Revolution, according to the encyclopedists. It was pulled by a six-horse team and was capable of carrying a five-ton load. The bottom of the wagon box was curved, rising at both ends so that in going up and down hills the goods would shift less easily and the end-gate be subject to less strain. The prairie-schooner was a modification of the Conestoga wagon.

Body of Caruso Lies in State; Embalmed in 1921

Because his friends and admirers in his native Italy could not bear to think of the body of Enrico Caruso moldering away in the earth after his death in 1921, they had it embalmed by a special process to preserve it indefinitely. The corpse of the famous singer still lies in a glass-covered casket in a mausoleum near Naples wrapped in an American flag. Clothing on the body is changed every three years.

IT WORKED FOR ME

Women should take only liquid laxatives

MORE people could feel fine, be fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and hospitals in relieving constipation. Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. Or one, the dose of which can't be exactly measured. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why it should be a liquid like Syrup Pepsin.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if it doesn't give you absolute relief, if it isn't a joy and comfort in the way it overcomes biliousness due to constipation, your money back.

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

By Editha L. Watson

SECRET OF THE BIG HORNS

A POUCH full of "yellow bullets" which really were big gold nuggets, a "free trapper" of the old times, and a fur company's greedy representatives: mix these well and add plenty of bad whisky, and you have the story of another lost mine.

"Old Man" LaPondre, as they called him, was a stubborn old soul. Years of free trapping had made him "independent as a woodchuck," and he felt beholden to no man. He had found his "yellow bullets" lying in a creek bed, and there were plenty more where these came from. Just where the creek with golden sands flowed, he would not tell. He wanted his little triumph first, of course. He could imagine going to St. Louis, showing the nuggets, and creating a sensation of the first water. Why, he would be rich enough to buy the American Fur company, lock, stock, and barrel! The idea was balm to his soul.

And, then, he planned, he would come back. He would leave St. Louis as ignorant as he found it. If these "yellow bullets" were what he thought they must be, he would cash in on them, buy some of the things he wanted, and come back to Fort Pierre. Then he would ask his friends to join him, and they would head toward the Big Horns and wealth.

Many a man had found gold in the Big Horns, thought Old Man LaPondre. But most of them had lost out, after all. Well, he wasn't going to lose out.

"Stick around, boys!" he said to his friends at Fort Pierre. "I'll be back in the spring, and we'll go out and pick rocks out of the creek." And he winked portentously, and chuckled at his little joke.

So his Dakota friends "stuck around" rather closely, for they believed the old man. And he, in high feather, went down to St. Louis to find out what was what. He found out—the nuggets were valued at almost unbelievable prices, and he, "Old Man" LaPondre, suddenly assumed the most wonderful importance.

The American Fur company, for instance, grew interested immediately. They offered to buy LaPondre, out, or to pay well for information, which would give them a chance at the location. But, "Nope," said the old man. "I'll keep what I've got. Me and my friends get first show." And so stubborn was he that no one could pry a word out of him which might betray his secret.

He was going back in the spring, he was, and his friends who waited at Fort Pierre should have their show.

He had no more chance to get away with it than he would have today. Flushed with the dreams of his vast wealth waiting beneath the waters of that mountain creek, he "let go all holts," and began to celebrate prematurely. He was aided, of course, by the lower element of St. Louis, who clung to him and fawned, and also by men who hoped to loosen his tongue and get the secret location. These men, though they were agents of the fur company, were working for themselves, for if they could discover the secret, they would never pause to tell it to anyone else. They kept the old man filled with liquor—none too good, that it might take effect sooner. And take effect it did, but not as anyone had planned—for Old Man LaPondre grew ill, sank into a coma, and died. With him died the secret of that crystal stream paved with gold, and to this day no man knows where to look for more of those alluring "yellow bullets."

THE RABBIT-HOLE TUNNEL

IN STEVENS GULCH, near Strontia Springs, Colo., was a deposit of ore which the Indians knew of in the very early days. The men mined the ore, the women crushed and washed it, and the gold was placed in turkey quills and taken as far East as the Mississippi river to trade with the white men.

Some years before the Civil war, two young men from St. Joseph, Mo., came West and found this Indian mine. In some manner they managed to get an ox wagon into the gulch, and this they loaded with very rich ore, which they took home and sold. They made a map of the location, marking on it where they had hidden their tools.

In 1861, they started back to the mine. Near Devils Head peak they were murdered, supposedly by the Indians whom they had despoiled.

A relative who had their map sent it to Henry Jackson, a negro, who had lived in the region during Indian days. Jackson recovered the tools from the place marked on the map, but he could not locate the mine.

In 1911 a young man named Johnson found some promising ore in the gulch which, when crushed and panned, showed a rich color. He noticed a rabbit go into a hole of some brush, but at the time he did not pay much attention. Later, when he heard the story of the lost mine, he returned and tried to find the tunnel, but it was no use.

Lesson for December 1

EZRA'S MISSION TO JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Ezra 7:6-10; 8:21-23, 31, 32.

GOLDEN TEXT—The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him. Ezra 8:22.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Bringing Gifts for God's House.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Ezra's Long Journey.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How God Helps.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Purposeful Prayer and Courageous Action.

I. Who Ezra Was (7:1-10).

1. A priest (vv. 1-5). He was from the line which was to stand between God and the people. The leader of the first company was Zerubbabel, a sort of military governor. The great need now was for a religious leader, for the people had gone far from God, as we see from the noble reformation which Ezra effected.

2. A ready scribe (v. 6). He was a teacher of the law of God.

3. His high ambition (vv. 7-10).

a. He set his heart to seek the law of the Lord (v. 10). He set out definitely with the purpose to know God's Word. No one who purposes in his heart to seek the law of the Lord can fail.

b. He set his heart to obey the Lord (v. 10). He was not only concerned with knowing God's Word but obeying it. God's Word cannot be known in its fullness by the intellect; it must be experienced. An essential qualification for a teacher of the Bible, a preacher, or Sunday school worker, is obedience to God's Word.

c. He set his heart to teach in Israel God's statutes and judgments (v. 10). He not only had a love for God's Word but a desire to implant it in the hearts of others.

II. Ezra's Commission (7:11-26).

Ezra went forth backed by the decree from King Artaxerxes. The king gave him a copy of the decree which authorized him to lead a company back to Jerusalem. This decree empowered him to

1. Collect funds (vv. 15, 16);
2. Levy tribute (vv. 21, 22);
3. Appoint magistrates and judges (v. 25);
4. Execute penalties (v. 26).

So great was the king's confidence in Ezra that he delegated all these powers to him. For this great favor Ezra lifted his heart to God in thanksgiving (vv. 27, 28). He was mainly concerned with the fact that he was to beautify the Lord's house and acknowledged that God had put his purpose into the king's heart.

III. The Company Which Returned With Ezra (Ezra 8:1-20).

This company was comparatively small, only 1,754 males, but including the women, children and servants there were perhaps 6,000 or 7,000 people. Before proceeding on the journey Ezra was careful to find out as to whether any of the Levites, the ministers of God, were with them (v. 15). He knew that the success of their enterprise depended upon the spiritual condition of the people. Temporal blessings and prosperity of the individual and the nation depend upon the people's attitude toward God.

IV. Ezra's Prayer and Fasting (8:21-23).

The first thing that he did was to seek God's guidance. The reason Ezra sought the Lord's help was that as far as possible he desired his mission to be free from human dependence. He did not minimize the dangers attending his journey, but since he had assured the king that the hand of the Lord would be upon all for good who sought him, he was ashamed to ask the king for a military escort to protect them from the marauding Arabs. His desire was to prove the reality of God's help, as God's honor among the heathen was at stake.

V. The Successful Journey (8:24-32).

God heard their prayer. The treasure entrusted to them was great. Perhaps the entire value of money and sacred utensils was nearly five million dollars. For a small caravan to go through a country infested by these robber bands carrying such an amount of money was most perilous, but Ezra knew that God was able and would protect them. Observe

1. The care and honesty (vv. 24-30). The money was weighed out them at the start and was to be weighed when turned over to the authorities at Jerusalem. The incentive to honest and strict accounting of the trust was that they were holy men and were entrusted with that which belonged to God.

2. Their safe arrival (vv. 31, 32). Some four and one-half months were required to make the journey. God brought them safely to their destination, thus proving that he is faithful to those who put their trust in him.

Perfect Love

Perfect love is distinguished by the character of its enjoyments. It craves the spiritual, the holy and Divine. Its enjoyments are purely religious; they are sought by prayer, reading the Scriptures, pious meditations and acts of Christian duty and usefulness. The enjoyments of a pure heart are sweet, rational and unwasting.

Objections

Nothing will ever be attempted if all possible objections must first be overcome.—Johnson

World Wheat Supply Is Cut 330,000,000 Bushels

This year's world wheat supply will be about 330,000,000 bushels less than in 1934-35, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics report on world wheat prospects.

Production is estimated at about 3,430,000,000 bushels and the world carryover outside of Russia at 800,000,000 bushels, or a total of about 4,230,000,000 bushels. Production last year was 3,459,000,000 bushels and carryover 1,100,000,000 bushels, or a total of about 4,559,000,000 bushels. The short crops this year will reduce world carryover by the end of this season to between 400,000,000 and 500,000,000 bushels, or not much more than normal world carryover prior to 1923.

"Calumet sure gives you your money's worth, with that Big New 10¢ Can!"

SAYS MRS. W. W. HICKEY, OF CHICAGO, ILL.

"THERE'S a lot of good baking in that 10c can of Calumet," observes Mrs. Hickey. "It's worth more than a dime any day!"

"Of course, with my big family I get the full-pound can—and it's only 25c now. As long as I bake, Calumet will be in my pantry!"

Grandfather Rommel, who was a baker for 40 years, says: "Calumet takes the guesswork out of the job nowadays."

LOOK AT THE NEW CALUMET CAN! A simple twist... and the Easy-Opening Top lifts off. No delay, no spilling, no broken fingernails!

WHAT makes Calumet so dependable? Why is it different from other baking powders? Calumet combines two distinct leavening actions. A quick action for the mixing bowl—set free by liquid. A slower action for the oven—set free by heat. This Double-Action produces perfect leavening.

All Calumet prices are lower! Calumet is now selling at the lowest prices in its history... The regular price of the Full-Pound Can is now only 25c! And ask to see the new 10c can—a lot of good baking for a dime—with Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder. A product of General Foods.

A BULL'S EYE FOR DAD

"WHY was coffee bad for you, Dad? ... I thought it was bad just for us kids!" "Oh, no! Many grown-ups, too, find that the caffeine in coffee upsets their nerves, causes indigestion or keeps them awake nights!"

If you are bothered by headaches, or indigestion, or can't sleep soundly... try Postum for 30 days. It contains no caffeine. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened. It's easy to make... costs less than half a cent a cup. It's delicious, too... and may prove a real help. A product of General Foods.

How America
Answers Her Critics

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

We have been hearing a lot of criticism lately concerning our American methods and principles.

For a while the detractors were content to sneer at our art, our literature, our simple recreations and pleasures. More recently, however, they have broadened their scope.
Today their hardest attacks are directed—often from within—at our democratic form of government, with its effective guarantees of freedom and opportunity for all. They favor, instead, certain European patterns which vest all power in a highly centralized government rather than in the people.

Such criticism has not gone unheeded. It is bearing greater fruit than many of us realize. Its arguments resound from the stump. Its influence appears in much of our recent legislation.

How can we combat it?
One method is to apply the acid test of realism. Why not turn to such critics and ask:

"Under what other form of government have a free people developed the wilderness into a nation as great, as wealthy, as productive as our United States?"

"Under what other form of government have citizens attained as high a standard of income, of living, and of general well-being as has been enjoyed by successive generations of Americans?"

"What other government has offered to its poorest boys such opportunities to rise to the height of their capacity as are illustrated by the careers of Lincoln and Edison?"

"What other government has according to all its citizens—to the least as well as to the greatest—the political power guaranteed under our American Constitution?"

And finally:
"How many of these advantages are offered to the average man by the modern European forms of government—with all their planned economy, their regimentation and their strong central authorities dictating to every citizen how he shall labor, how he shall live, how he shall think?"

Utopian Idea

God grant that not only the love of liberty, but a thorough knowledge of the rights of man may pervade all the nations of the earth, so that a philosopher may set his foot anywhere on its surface and say, "This is my country."
—Benjamin Franklin.
